HARVEST FEST: WELCOMING THE FALL SEASON

Kali Macklin
Staff Writer

On Wednesday Oct. 31, Sinclair will be holding its annual Harvest Fest event. The fest will be taking place in the Tartan Marketplace in building 7 from 11:00 p.m to 1:00 p.m. and will be offering many activities for students to celebrate the fall season.

This event has been held at Sinclair for almost 20 years. The theme of this year's Harvest Fest is "Be present and be thankful" as students will be finishing up their midterms, it is important to be present and acknowledge all the hard work that has been put in so far this semester.

We are welcoming fall, harvest and Thanksgiving; taking a moment to step back and enjoy the moment will relax us all.

There will be a variety of treats to enjoy and activities to participate in.

There will be an International Trick or Treat where students will have the opportunity to try different candies from various cultures all around the world. There will be candies from Italy, Ukraine, China and many more.

Overall, there will be six different countries represented along with information on how harvest is celebrated around the world.

There will also be a pick your own pumpkin hosted by Student and Community Engagement where students can pick out a little pumpkin and decorate it.

The Multifaith Campus Ministry will be giving away pink blessing beads, in honor of October being breast cancer awareness month, as well.

The Library will be creating a tree of all the books we are thankful for.

The Bookstore will be hosting Haunted Hoops, where students can play a round of basketball with the possibility of winning a t-shirt.

The Clarion will also be hosting a costume contest. Come down to our table dressed in your costume and enter to win a gift card (amount and to where is TBD). The Clarion photographers will be at the event ready to snap the best costumes.

The first, second and third place winners will get a shout out in a future edition of the Clarion and have their picture put on the paper.

However, if dressing up isn't your thing, the Clarion will also offer a fake news trivia quiz and information about what we do. Be on the lookout as well for a life sized interactive model of our mascot Clary.

Accessibility Services will be there in honor of October being disability awareness month. There will be many other offices represented and present at the event to celebrate.

There will be food, including cookies and apple cider, games, music and the Art Club will be hosting a bake sale in the Library Loggia.

"It will be a whole lot of fun, we hope everyone stops by!" said Tristan Chaput, Coordinator of Student Engagement.

Sinclair Volleyball Sets Their Eyes on the Finish Line

Sinclair Community College

“He says to slow down a lot, slowing the game down is more than slowing your play down but, more so think about what you’re doing,” said Bierlien, on one huge element Gan implements in his team.

Holbrook, Robinson and Bierlien all had two common denominators, lack of energy but strength in the mental game. The team bounced back from three losses in a row to a win against Clark State on Oct. 17, but in order to keep their mental game strong they know they have to keep their energy up.

“We’re all just here to have fun,” said Bierlien, which is a theme for the team.

“I’ve met some of my best friends on this team, we all have our own sisterhood,” said Holbrook.

With the season coming to an end the team still have their eyes on the prize and continue to set goals for themselves.

The team has sophomore night and their last home game on Oct. 19 with two more season games to follow before regionals start on Nov. 1.

The Women’s Volleyball team at Sinclair is currently third in their conference with an 8-5 record in conference play and an overall record of 18-13. With only a few games left before sophomore night, the girls are focused on how to end their season strongly.

Coach Kum Chee Gan is in his 20th season at Sinclair Women’s Volleyball team. Gan has received Coach of the Year three times, in 2000, 2005 and 2012.

This year a freshman, Nicole Sickling, won the OCCAC Division II Volleyball Player of the Week award four times this season, with two of those wins occurring consecutively.

in high school. Holbrook, who is originally from Middletown, In. said that Gan has put a lot of emphasis on the mental aspect of the sport, which has really helped her improve her game.

“Being a team is the most important thing,” Holbrook said. “A lot of our goals are wrapped around being a team, being positive and proactive.”

Shai Robinson, sophomore, said that in the beginning the team struggled a little bit with their chemistry and the loss of a player due to an ACL tear.

“We are working on closing the block, and reading the hitters,” said Robinson. The team is keeping their focus on improving their trouble areas before regionals and they know exactly what those are.

One thing she and Holbrook both said is their most improved individual skill is their mental game, and that it has improved the whole team’s outlook on the game and how to perform together as a whole.

Shayna Bierlein, a sophomore, said that the incoming freshmen have brought a lot of talent to the team. Bierlien suffered from an ACL tear last season.

Although it was hard for her to sit on the sidelines and watch her team, she wanted nothing more than to help and inspire not only the freshmen, but all of her teammates to do and be their best.

Bierlien always knew that she wanted to be a coach from a young age but Coach Gan has truly inspired her even more.

Coach Gan’s coaching tactics are different from what freshman Hallie Holbrook was used to when playing

The New NFL: Changing of The Guard

Justin Pokorski
Graphic Designer

The NFL has seemingly turned over the keys to the next generation of talent. This is especially true with the recent success of young quarterbacks in the NFL this year.

This generational shift also occurs alongside the year of passing, where several records have been broken with regards to passing yards, points and passing touchdowns through the first quarter of the season.

Deshaun Watson, Carson Wentz, Jared Goff, Patrick Mahomes and Mitchell Trubisky have all had success as of late and all of them are at or under the age of 25.

Mahomes currently leads the league in passing touchdowns through the end of week 6 at 18. Trubisky had a six-touchdown performance in week 4 against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

Goff and Wentz managed to lead their teams to the playoffs in the 2017 season while only in their 2nd year. This was after both had a seemingly slow start in their rookie seasons going 4-12 and 7-9 respectively, although Goff only started in 7 of the 16 games in 2016.

Watson had a breakout 2017 until his stellar season was derailed by an ACL tear which he sustained in practice after a week 8 matchup with the Seattle Seahawks. Watson was on pace for 43 touchdowns and 18 interceptions, which would've nearly doubled the record for passing touchdowns in a season by a rookie quarterback at 26 (Russell Wilson and Peyton Manning).

Wentz also suffered an ACL tear in week 14 of the same season, ending his MVP caliber season. Both Wentz and Watson were dominating the league and clear front-runners for the MVP award if not for injuries sidelining them.

Wentz ended the season in high spirits though. His efforts through the first 14 weeks of the season ended up being enough to secure a playoff spot for the Philadelphia Eagles with a record of 13-3. They later ended up winning Super Bowl LII (52).

Through the first six weeks of the season, the quintuplet ranks 1st (Mahomes), T-8th (Goff), T-12th (Trubisky), T-16th (Watson) and T-21st (Wentz) in touchdowns. 4th (Goff), 6th (Mahomes), 7th (Watson), 22nd (Trubisky) and 24th (Wentz) in passing yards. And 4th (Trubisky), 6th (Goff), 9th (Wentz), 19th (Watson) and 23rd (Mahomes) in completion percentage.

With all five of these quarterbacks being in the top 10 in at least one of the three main passing stats, it is pretty clear that they are very ahead of where 2nd and 3rd-year quarterbacks usually are.

Of the five quarterbacks, three are leading their divisions (Mahomes, Goff and Trubisky) with records of 5-1, 6-0 and 3-2 respectively. The other two (Wentz and Watson) have both split the season with three wins and three losses each.

Pre-season predictions had the Rams (2nd) and Eagles as top three Super Bowl contenders while the Texans and Chiefs are either favorites to win the division or to secure a wildcard spot.

Only the Bears were considered unlikely to make the playoffs considering their tough division where the Vikings and Packers are favorites to make the playoffs as well competing in a very tough conference in the NFC.

If the season ended today, three of the teams would make the playoffs (Chiefs - Mahomes, Rams - Goff and Bears - Trubisky) while the other two are third and fourth in the hunt for their respective conferences (Texans - Watson [AFC] and Eagles - Wentz [NFC] respectively).

With all this in mind, I haven't even mentioned the five first-round quarterbacks. The 2018 draft was tied for 2nd in NFL history since 1970 for quarterbacks taken in the first round.

It only trails the 1983 draft which ended up having three Hall of Fame quarterbacks in Dan Marino, John Elway and Jim Kelly.

The quarterbacks were drafted 1st (Baker Mayfield), 3rd (Sam Darnold), 7th (Josh Allen), 10th (Josh Rosen) and 32nd (Lamar Jackson). Marking the most quarterbacks drafted in the top 10 picks of a single draft at four.

The 2018 draft isn't likely going to generate the talent that the 1983 draft class had, but it is too early to tell.

Between the five quarterbacks, they have combined for 17 starts and 26 games (Mayfield 3 starts; 4 games, Darnold 6 starts; 6 games, Allen 5 starts; 6 games, Rosen 3 starts; 4 games and Jackson 0 starts; 6 games).

Mayfield, Allen and Rosen have had the challenge of a quarterback competition and having to compete with another quarterback throughout the season while Darnold was given the job at the start of the season and Jackson appears to be fixed as the backup.

All five of the teams seem to feel pretty secure with their young quarterbacks as do the aforementioned teams. With this being said, it will be weird heading into the 2019 draft with teams such as the Browns, Texans, Bills, Bears and Jets not looking for a quarterback as they've all been quite active in the quarterback department whether it be drafting, starting or trading for quarterbacks seemingly every season.

Now that these 10 aforementioned teams have seemingly found their franchise quarterback, they join the likes of the Raiders, 49ers and Cowboys who also have younger/in their prime quarterbacks while the Patriots, Saints, Chargers, Packers and Steelers all have future Hall of Famers making their offenses.

This is one of the first seasons in a while where almost every team has an at least seemingly clear-cut QB1 in their squad.

It should be interesting to see how the next few years play out as Brady, Roethlisberger, Brees, Rivers and Rodgers get older and closer to retirement. Will these new young guns step up or fizzle out for even younger talent?

Hurricane Michael Devastates Florida Panhandle

Youtube

Sean Kahle
Staff Writer

Hurricane Michael, a storm which formed on Oct. 7, 2018, has caused a great deal of damage to the Florida panhandle. The storm is considered the third most intense Atlantic hurricane to hit the United States, in terms of pressure. The maximum sustained winds were measured at 155 m.p.h.

People are trying to recover from the damage whilst teams are searching the wreckage for any people that are unaccounted for. As they search, the death toll continues to rise.

Right now, there are 27 accounted US deaths according to the BBC. Many of the missing are from Panama City.

According to Time, there are $8 billion in insured losses caused by the hurricane.

Amid the destruction caused by the storm, there is still no power in many regions as well as a struggle to obtain food and fuel.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) is assisting people by setting up distribution points where people can get food and water.

Many people are still in shelters as well, since their homes were destroyed by Michael.

School districts, jails and prisons are also affected by the storm. Many schools are closed until further notice since they do not have power.

The Florida Department of Corrections as well as the Bay Correctional Facility have had to evacuate and relocate inmates to other facilities.

Telecommunications services were also hindered due to Michael, with many unable to contact loved ones.

Although it was hindered, cell phone service has begun to be restored to the region affected. Some are criticizing the phone companies over how long service has taken to come back.

Verizon announced that a three month credit would be given to every customer in the Bay and Gulf regions.

Among infrastructure affected, US 98, the roadway that follows the coastline along the Panhandle, is closed in multiple places due to washouts.

A great deal of Michael's wrath also hit the state of Georgia. Much damage was done to crops, as well as debris causing a substantial amount to homes and other parts of the city. Many people also report that they are without power, meaning a significant amount of harm done to the infrastructure in Albany alone.

Looters are taking advantage of the misfortune of people and their property that was hit during the storm.

Armed looters are targeting homes and businesses in the middle of the region devastated by the hurricane. Some people have made signs that threaten the looters in an attempt to ward them off.

Police officers have also been strained, working 16 to 18 hour shifts with their own homes being destroyed with no sleep or ability to shower.

Utility workers are working in the region in an effort to rebuild the infrastructure destroyed by the storm.

Hurricane Michael is currently one of the most damaging hurricanes to hit the United States.

With a wide scale of damage to home, businesses and infrastructure, the effect has been felt by many.

Between rebuilding and facing looters, people are still facing the pain brought on by hurricane Michael.

Sinclair Talks About Cuba and More

Cerridwyn Kuykendall
Managing Editor

Every semester Sinclair is home to an abundance of events, themed weeks and talks to help raise awareness, build community engagement and present students with new ideas.

One of these events at Sinclair is the International Series. Each International Series event focuses on one country, and is usually hosted by one or two professors or Sinclair faculty who have visited and/or are knowledgeable about the chosen country. This series of talks, is apart of Sinclair Talks.

Sinclair Talks is a series of events hosted by the Student and Community Engagement office, the topics range in a variety from the International Series to many different types of guest speakers and presentations.

The most recent International Series topic was Cuba, and the event took place on Oct. 17 in the basement of building eight. Two professors, Laurel Mayer and Derek Petrey, hosted the talk.

The event started out with authentic Cuban music and a Cuban dish served to guests. Afterwards, Petrey and Mayer talked about the country overall, as well as their personal experiences visiting in past years.

The professors shared many stories, pictures from their respective trips and knowledge about the country's history and current situation. Topics discussed ranged from the current political powers, how the country is working towards more self sustainability for food and some of the vast history of the country.

In the next International Series professor Amanda Hayden will be talking about India, the event will be hosted in the same location on Nov. 14 from 12:00 p.m. to 1:00 p.m.

Next semester the International Series will feature talks on Scotland, South Africa, Zimbabwe and Italy. All information can be found on Sinclair's event page.

Other Sinclair Talks events this semester include Sinclair Talks: Why Democracy? on Oct. 22 presented by Laurel Mayer. And Sinclair Talks: The Importance of Holocaust Education and Reclaiming Religion from Intolerance and Violence, on Nov. 8 in the library Loggia.

This event will be presented by professor Tim Martin and guest speaker Renate Frydman, as well as professor Amanda Hayden and Chaplain Larry Lindstrom.

Sinclair Talks covers a variety of topics throughout each semester, each with different approaches and speakers. From Cuba and Zimbabwe, to democracy and the importance of holocaust education, and themed weeks such as Breast Cancer Awareness Week and Green Dot Week, Sinclair is full of events to choose from.

Baker's Beat: The Journey Toward Leadership

Baker

Justin A. Baker
Staff Writer

What is leadership? Is it always knowing what to do in a situation? Is it taking charge and making sure that everyone who follows you lives to tell the tale? Or is it just always doing the right thing without hesitation or doubt?

These were the questions swirling

Thursday and concluded on Sunday. It was an incredible gathering of minority men of all colors, from all states, backgrounds and experiences.

The panel of speakers for the event was just as diverse. I learned a true leader must look after his financial well-being; something I believe everyone could use help with.

In another speaker's session, I experienced a connection with all attendees in that group when we sat around and shared our true stories of racism which was directed toward us for no other reason than the color of our skin.

We found out through seminars that no matter where we are from, we have felt the cold hand of racism and discrimination. In order to overcome, we must rise above.

The seminar was capped off by the incredible speaker/hypeman, Brian Heat. He made us all stand up, shout affirmation of strength and positivity, which have carried on outside of the seminar. Much to the chagrin of my roommates, who disapprove of my shouting in the morning!

The seminar was great but I truly learned what being a leader was from the places we visited outside of the seminar. I had the utmost privilege to see the incredible African American museum.

The museum was laid out with the bottom three levels all about the struggle and pain of those who were kidnapped into slavery, discriminated against and killed for sport.

The top three levels were dedicated to the triumph and to the accomplishments and contribution that African Americans have made to America. We also visited the Oprah Winfrey museum, it showed the hard work of an extraordinary woman.

After that incredible experience, we got to travel, visiting the monuments of some of America's greatest leaders: Abraham Lincoln, Thomas Jefferson and George Washington.

The true treat for me was when we got to stop at the recently built Martin Luther King Jr. monument. Carved out of stone is the image of the legendary civil rights leader; surrounded by his famous sayings, which have echoed throughout history giving courage to the feeble and strength to the downtrodden.

It was surreal seeing an image tower over you of your hero, and knowing that others felt the same awe that you did at that moment. As I sat on the plane flying back to Dayton, OH, I once again thought upon what makes a leader?

I finally decided that a leader is a person who sees something wrong in the world and strives to fix it, with no concern for their own well-being, but rather concern about the future generation that will be affected.

A leader is someone who cares and does the right thing because it's the right thing to do. And finally, a leader inspires all those things in everyday people so they can become leaders in their own right.

I don't know if I am that kind of leader yet, but I know I'm working every day to become a man who people can look up to and smile in awe for all the things he did to make their lives better than they could ever imagine.

Baker

around in my head as I headed to the annual Men of Color leadership summit.

Last week in Washington D.C, the literal mecca of leadership and power of this great nation. This incredible opportunity was honestly something I didn't think I was cut out for.

I'm sorry to say that all of my life, I have been a follower, not a leader in any real sense of the word. I was ready to change that and hoped those who were running the seminar this year could help me become the leader I hoped was inside of me.

The seminar started on a

IMAGINE DRAGONS

Erika Brandenburg
Arts and Entertainment Editor

On Oct. 3 the pop-rock band Imagine Dragons announced they would be releasing their fourth album "Origins" on Nov. 9, 2018. Two singles have been released so far, one being "Natural" on July 17 and has since become the anthem for the ESPN College Football season this year.

The second single is "Zero" and it was released on Sept. 19. It will be used as the end credit music for the upcoming movie "Ralph Breaks the Internet."

Both of these songs serve as the lead singles to "Origins" which has been stated to be the sister album to their previous one "Evolve." The release of this fourth album will complete that cycle in their music.

Imagine Dragons formed in Las Vegas, NV in 2008 when lead singer Dan Reynolds and drummer Andrew Tolman met at Brigham Young University as they were both students at that time. Eventually, the duo gained Andrew Beck, Dave Lemke and Aurora Florence to play guitar, bass and piano respectively.

Over the course of the first couple years, members came and went from the band. Beck and Florence left in 2008, leading to the recruitment of Wayne Sermon, a Berklee College of Music graduate, as the band's new guitarist.

Tolman then brought his wife Brittany on board for back up vocals and to play keyboard. With a few more switch outs occurring and leading to the recruitment of Ben McKee as bassist, the band has finally gotten a solid line up.

Their first huge break came in the form of the Bite of Las Vegas Festival in 2009. They were called in to fill for Train after their frontman fell ill, leading to them performing in front of a crowd of over 26,000 people.

The group ended up with a large following in their hometown of Provo, UT before they moved to Las Vegas. There, the band recorded and released their first three EPs.

Two were released in 2010, one with simply titled "Imagine Dragons" while the other is "Hell and Silence." The third came about in 2011 under the name "It's Time" prior to the band being signed a record deal.

November 2011 Interscope Records signed the band's record label and the band began to work with English Grammy winning producer, Alex da Kid. Prior to this, the Tolmans left and Daniel Platzman came into the band in August 2011 through an invitation from McKee. Theresa Flaminio came aboard as well as the keyboardist, only to leave in early 2012.

Their first full length album "Night Visions" was released on Sept. 4, 2012. The first week of sales had 83,000 copies sold along with the album peaking at number two on the Billboard 200 chart, making it the highest charting rock album since 2006.

The second single on the album "Radioactive" broke multiple records including spending 87 weeks total on the Billboard Top 100, and remained number one on the Hot Rock Songs chart for 23 weeks along with over seven million singles being sold.

On Feb. 17, 2015, the band came out with their second studio album called "Smoke + Mirrors." During this era, they released a number of separate singles such as "Battle Cry" for the "Transformers: Age of Extinction" film and "Warriors" for the 2014 League of Legends World Championship.

The band took a hiatus for the rest of 2016 after their tour, citing that they "haven't stopped in, like, six years, so we've forced ourselves to at least take a year off."

However, on Sept. 27, 2016, the band began to tease their third album by simply tweeting "studio." Over the next several months, they posted cryptic messages up until the release of the lead single "Believer" on Feb. 1, 2017. The full album "Evolve" was released months later on June 23, reaching the top five in several countries to mixed reception.

Throughout the career of "Imagine Dragons," they have received several awards and nominations for their music. Since they debuted, they have won one Grammy Award, three American Music Awards, and nine Billboard Music Awards along with several accolades.

The Witch's House Remake

Erika Brandenburg
Arts and Entertainment Editor

“The Witch’s House MV” will be released on Steam on Oct. 31. The original game was simply titled “The Witch’s House” as MV was added as a reference to it being remade in RPG Maker MV.

The game is a freeware, puzzle oriented horror RPG made in the program RPG Maker VX, by a Japanese creator known as Fummy. It was released on Oct. 3, 2012 and can run on various systems including Windows systems dating back to Windows 2000 and Mac OS.

In addition to updated graphics, “The Witch’s House MV” will feature new events along with two difficulties that can be unlocked after the player completes the main story once in order to create more replay value past the true ending.

This survival horror game is about a young girl named Viola waking up in the middle of a foggy forest. A torn note is nearby and her exit out of the forest is blocked by a dense bush of roses.

From there, she turns back and approaches a mansion a little bit beyond the trees and speaks to a black cat. The cat advises that the only way to leave is by exploring the house and seeking the way out from there.

However, the game wouldn’t allow it to be as simple as finding the owner and asking to be freed.

The mansion is riddled with death traps which can activate as the story goes, by investigating too much in an area, failing a puzzle or simply existing.

This house is out to kill the protagonist in any way possible which makes for a suspenseful journey.

With themes of murder, death, violence and abuse, those who are squeamish would absolutely want to steer clear of this title. While it may not have been gruesome with 16-bit graphics in the original, the updates certainly add a more graphic nature to the game.

This gives the player a true view of what fates may befall Viola if too many mistakes are made over the course of the game.

Throughout the game there is lore aplenty, spread out in the form of diaries from the witch of the house, Ellen.

The player can learn about her life, receiving vague hints as to what led up to this. The save points are represented by the black cat Viola spoke with outside of the mansion at the beginning of the game.

“The Witch’s House” has four separate endings, though two of them are more for a bit of extra content. The normal ending involves completing the game without collecting an item specified early on if the player investigated enough.

The true ending only appears if, during the endgame, the player picks up the item and then proceeds to leave the house. The true ending reveals more dialogue which sheds light on what you had read and some of the sights throughout the house.

As for the extra endings, one requires the player to run through the game without saving at any point. It’s a hidden extreme mode in the game and when completed, gives the player more expositional dialogue for those that are curious to learn more.

The other requires the player to not play the game and just have Viola stand in the spot; she wakes up in an hour to obtain new information.

Fummy also released a prequel series titled “The Witch’s House: The Diary of Ellen” to divulge more information on the witch since the diaries in-game do not give the full story. A manga adaptation illustrated by Yuna Kagesaki began publishing in 2017.

The story of Ellen talks about her tragic past, and how she eventually passed and made a deal with a demon, in the alleyways behind her home.

The series is comprised of horror like themes, puzzles and twists at every turn, with many possible ways to end the journey.

Sinclair Cares Counseling Services

Many people in the Dayton community have medicine that has expired or it is unused and may be seeking how to properly dispose of these items. Unused medication may contribute to illegal abuse or provide an opportunity to overdose.

Additionally, flushing pharmaceutical products into the sewer system contributes to water contamination. Please be environmentally safe and cautious... don't flush your unused pills.

It has been reported that a majority of prescription drugs abused were obtained from family and friends. A study also showed that many young people who abuse drugs took prescription medication from their parents/guardians medicine cabinets.

To support National Pill-Take-Back Day, Sinclair Community College is partnering with the DEA to secure a bin to safely collect and dispose of pill-form medication.

Please bring unused pill-form medication to Building 14 walkway, 10/25-26/18, 11 a.m.-1 p.m.

Many people struggle to find their life purpose, or calling. There is no set formula to figure out what your calling is, but the Ombuddy wants to share three tips to make the process less intimidating:

- Break the question down into something more manageable – instead of thinking “what's my life purpose?” try thinking “what can I do with my time that feels important and gives me a sense of satisfaction?”

- Not everything is fun all the time. Even the things you enjoy most have some aspect of discomfort to them. Think back to the things you brainstormed from bullet one. Do the positives outweigh the negatives? If the answer is yes, you are on the right track, because you will likely stick with them.

- Let go of the idea that there is only ONE thing you are destined to do. Your purpose in life comes from getting into action!

My Voice: Old School vs New School Part 2

Tiauna Horejsi
Reporter

Over the past week I've been doing a lot more research on the Tupac vs. Drake debate. I started a poll on Facebook and 84 percent of people voted for Tupac Shakur while only 16 percent voted for Drake Graham.

Surprisingly most of the ones that voted for Drake, voted for him because they did not know who Tupac was. Is this really a good reason to say Drake is a better rapper than Tupac without even knowing him?

I feel that you should not be able to say who's better if you have not heard both of their work.

The ones that did vote for Tupac had great things to say about him, for example my good friend Cheyanne Womble stated: "Tupac was an amazing artist, he didn't grow up with a gold spoon in his mouth. He went through struggles every day of his life," meaning he could rap about his life and struggles and this is what drew people to his music; the realness of who he was and what he stood for.

Google

Cheyanne goes on to say, "His mom was a drug addict and you could easily write a 100-page essay about him."

I agree with Cheyanne all the way because she's saying that Drake did not go through the various struggles that Tupac went through.

Regardless of what Tupac went through he did not let that stop him but he embraced it through his music. I feel this is what a lot of rappers are missing today, the struggle.

The story behind their music and not just rapping about money, drugs and sex; That's what a lot of music is all about now but back then there was soul in it.

Another comment made by Gabby Turner in supporting her vote for Tupac was:

"Tupac was an actor, innovator, man of the truth and spoke the truth no matter the repercussions of anyone."

I loved this response because everything she said about Tupac was true, he was not afraid to speak the ugly truth. Tupac talked about things that matter, yes he was known as a thug but he was not afraid to show that side of him no matter who was looking.

One person that voted for Drake said that did it because he's cute, well does this really make him a better rapper? To me this is not a good enough argument on why Drake is a better rapper. What do looks have to do with a person's talent?

Drake may dress the part but until someone comes up with a better argument than not knowing who Tupac is, Drake looks better or that his raps are just poems, I'm not convinced. Lastly, the comment I liked was from Candra Lakes she stated:

"Tupac always told a story and he was just real. His music portrayed his life, struggles, come up, and humility; his music that made people think as well as enjoy. Drake makes good music, but Tupac made great music he will always be a legend to me."

Well said Candra; Tupac will always be a legend to me as well.

Poetry Pick

Faint Stars of Dread

Unbearable, the snowdrops, as if winter could be something lived through.
 Overmuch, this reminder of life,
 the dead earth candling its sorrows with bowed heads in silent mourning.

Implausible, to have been—meaning to have harmed, to have cut the bud by the root—as if being could ever,
 perpetually, end with softness.
 Or begin in Kyrie eleison, a call echoed by white bells.
